

campJS

campJS is helping people find information about camps. People can view different campgrounds and see its rating but for adding information each user must sign up. Once user is logged in, he/she can do add (CRUD) on campgrounds. Logged in users can comment on different campgrounds. Only the person that create a campground have the authority to delete or edit the campgrounds as well as their comment.

The front-end part of this project is using HTML, CSS, Bootstrap, and Javascript. The animations on the project are either Animate.CSS library or Custom CSS animation. Its is running under EJS Templating engine.

The back-end part of this project is using Node.js and express, its web application framework. For its database, it uses mongoDB NoSQL document database, although in its online version it uses mLab as a cloud database service for MongoDB cloud. campJS exploits different npm packages as well. For connecting to MongoDB it uses mongoose. For its pop up messages it uses flash package. For its authentication it uses Passport.js middleware package for Node.JS and since it is using local sign in, it uses passport local package as well. It uses Restful Routing and for HTTP PUT and DELETE request handling it uses method-override package. It uses body-parser middleware for accessing request body property. In the next pages, you can pictures of different pages of this project.
